

Job Title: MS English and Social Science

Department: Faculty

Reports to: K-8 Director

We are seeking a skilled and experienced Middle School English and Humanities teacher for the 2022-23 school year. The ideal candidate has a strong educational background, English and history content knowledge, exemplary pedagogical skills, a passion for teaching and learning, and experience in designing curriculum. Further, successful candidates will also possess familiarity with student-centered approaches and project-based learning.

Steamboat Mountain School's humanities classes afford students active learning opportunities to engage purposefully with texts, construct meaning from literature, engage with numerous sources, consider multiple perspectives, and develop their writing skills. The ideal candidate should have 3-5 years of experience teaching middle school. Candidates should have demonstrated expertise in collaborative and inquiry-based teaching methodologies. A desire to work closely with colleagues, the flexibility to teach multiple ages, and an active interest in teaching with technology is preferred. Candidates should have a bachelor's degree in English or history; a master's degree and/or teaching credential is preferred.

Specific job responsibilities include but are not limited to teaching 2-3 sections of Middle School English, two sections of Middle School social science, advising a small group of students, extracurricular duties, and leading outdoor education activities.
